

Dear Mr Pai & The FCC,

I and many other Americans strongly support the need for Net Neutrality regulation from the FCC. While I agree that Net Neutrality should eventually be protected by congressional legislation, it is wildly irresponsible for the FCC to abandon the Title II framework before congress passes such a law. An open internet plays a huge role in the ability of American companies to innovate and thrive. Net Neutrality under Title II protects this type of innovation. It's just that simple.

Sincerely,
Cameron Huppertz
